

Master the Art of Selling

Selling is tougher than ever before. Your potential customers are busier, more stressed and have fewer resources than in the past – yet you still have to make the sale! In this seminar we will take an in-depth look at who you are selling your product or service to and how you are setting yourself up for success or potentially failure simply by not understanding and respecting the individual you are trying to sell to. We will also look at defining your niche and improving your communication skills along the way so you are bringing the best you to the table and to ensure that you are not putting up ‘sales roadblocks’ without realizing it.

Tanis Roeder, the presenter, has made a living in commission sales positions for the past 9 years. Her reasoning behind this statement is that she loves what she does and she has always represented a product or service that in her opinion ‘sells itself’, she simply provides an Elevated level of customer service to go along with it. Tanis believes that this is what every salesperson should be able to say! If this isn’t something that you have caught yourself saying or if you utter those exact words - this seminar is for you!
